

Return to Work Matters is a professional networking and resource site serving return to work professionals. The focus begins with RTW Coordinators, but includes employees, managers and supervisors, HR, OHS, medical and rehabilitation practitioners and claims managers. Return to Work Matters includes RTW discussions, news, case studies, research updates, downloadable tools such as presentations, handouts and surveys, a handbook for RTW management and a weekly newsletter that lists new content and what's happening in RTW.

Benefits of the site include:

- Accessibility to tools such as case studies and methods for communicating with treating practitioners
- A handbook of return to work management
- Provides a resource for learning and development
- Provides ideas on case management and methods for influencing others such as senior management and employees
- Involvement in cross disciplinary discussions / gaining the perspectives of others in the field
- Covers a broad range of topics relevant to the field, e.g. health and productivity, wellness programs, benchmarking RTW performance, and assessing and increasing motivation in employees.

Nabenet have partnered with Return To Work Matters to offer you 3 months free access to the site, please contact Teresa Coffey on (03) 9329 3898 to obtain the free access code or email teresacoffey@nabenet.com.au.
